

You never stop searching for God.

Growing up with her two brothers and one sister in Detroit, Sister Dorothy Diederichs wanted to be a missionary in China. She was also interested in becoming a nurse; teaching never entered her thoughts! But she was taught by IHM Sisters and felt called to their authentic religious life. There was something deep within her that led her to the IHM community.

Her worldview was shattered and she became aware of being a part of a bigger movement. She relates, “That’s where it started for me, seeing the world differently, through the eyes of the poor as they interpreted the Gospel. My experience in Brazil, and the fact that it coincided with the birth of the whole liberation movement, has deeply influenced my life.”

Ten years after Sister Dorothy’s novitiate, having taught primary grades in Pontiac, Bloomfield Hills and inner-city Detroit, her missionary dreams were realized: she was sent to Puerto Rico, where she taught fifth through eighth grades. She was challenged to learn Spanish to be effective in catechetical work among the poor.

After six years in Puerto Rico, she and three other sisters were missioned to Recife, Brazil, as part of the Archdiocese of Detroit’s Mission Team in Latin America. “Many of the people around us did not have running water or electricity,” she recalls. “The people lived on the hillside, in close quarters, in homes built with mud. The formation of Base Christian Communities in light of Vatican II was a focus of our efforts, based on reading and reflection of the Scripture.

When her father passed away, Sister Dorothy returned to the United States to be with her mother. She was elected to the IHM Southwest Province team, and for six years, she assisted the sisters who were ministering in the southwest and provided support for their ministries. Later, as director of the Michigan Farm Worker Ministry Coalition advocating for farm workers, especially UFW and FLOC, she was educating the local and state churches/groups about farmworker struggles and seeking their support.

Sister Dorothy went back to Brazil to continue her ministry and stayed for 12 more years. She returned to the U.S. and “Gradually the people came to believe who they were as people of God and their human rights should be respected. Because of this awareness, the people began to demand water and better living conditions. From the point of view of the Gospel, they understood and gradually claimed their own value as people,” she notes. While in Brazil, Sister Dorothy had the opportunity to go to the Latin America Pastoral Institute in Ecuador, where she studied with the foremost liberation theologians.

became part of the Detroit ecumenical group, MOSES, a program for social change; she also tutored at Marygrove. After six years, she moved to the Motherhouse, where she is active working on many committees. She is most grateful to God and to the IHM community for the opportunity to be of service to people.
